

EDMONTON LINKED WITH THE EAST

CANADIAN NORTHERN RAILROAD IN THE CITY

The City will be En Fete To-Morrow over the Realization of the Hopes of Years—Company and City will Join in the Demonstrations

The main line of the Canadian Northern railway is completed to Edmonton. The steel gang crossed the city limits yesterday afternoon and by evening had laid the rails as far as the junction of Boundary avenue and Clark street, leaving a gap of only three quarters of a mile to the station yards. Nothing was done on the work this morning and the remaining link will probably be left until tomorrow morning and completed in time for the celebration.

A through line of railway eastward, opening up the magnificent agricultural country in the valley of the North Saskatchewan, placing central Alberta in direct connection with the commercial life of the continent and bringing the benefits of railway competition to the trade of the far West has been the dream and hope of Edmonton and the Edmonton district for years—a dream at last come true, a hope now realized.

It has been felt that the occasion should be marked by a celebration aptly representing in character and scope the importance of the event and the public appreciation of the material change in conditions created by the completion of the new line. This celebration, it was expected would have been undertaken by the city, but the officials of the road intimated a desire to take the initiative in the matter. The ceremony was fixed for tomorrow afternoon which will be declared a public holiday by the Mayor and generally observed as a time of public rejoicing.

The official program being in the hands of the C.N.R. officials will not be known fully until their arrival here tomorrow, but from the arrangements made it is apparent that it will be in keeping with the event and the progressive character of the company. The ceremony of driving the last spike will be performed by Lieutenant Governor Bulyea who will be presented as a souvenir of the occasion with a magnificent silver spike suitably carved. The Mayor and civic officials of the neighboring towns and those along the C. & E. have been invited to attend as the guests of the company and it is expected there will be a large attendance of prominent citizens from all parts of the province.

The celebration having been thus undertaken by the company it was felt that the city should retain in kind and the city council and council of the board of trade met in the council chamber yesterday to discuss matters when it was decided to tender a civic banquet to the officials and party tomorrow evening at the Queen's hotel. Strong committees were chosen to ensure the function being first class in every respect. The officials and those who attend the celebration as their guests will be the guests of the city.

C.N.R. PARTY LEAVES WINNIPEG
Winnipeg, Nov. 23.—Vice President, D. D. Mann of the C.N.R. left shortly after midnight this morning by special train for Edmonton to be present at the ceremony of driving the last spike on Friday. He was accompanied by C. F. Chipman, of the H. B. Co., John

SASKATCHEWAN

Elections Will Be Held on Dec. 13th—Liberals Confident

Regina, Sask., Nov. 22.—Election day has been fixed for the 13th of December. The farmers of Saskatchewan are just completing threshing, which operation was delayed owing to the weather in October, and are only ready now to take an interest in the campaign.

A big fight is being put up by the Liberals. As they get misrepresentation and the school boys, cleared up, public opinion is swinging strongly in favor of the Scott government.

Present indications are that the Liberals will sweep Saskatchewan as they swept Alberta, being absolutely certain of carrying 18 to 20 out of the 25 seats. There is not a single constituency in which the Liberal candidate has not a good fighting chance.

The Haultain candidates here, like the Conservative candidates in the Alberta contest, have a variety of policies upon the school question. Benoit or Batche and Chisholm of Battleford, both Conservative candidates, are out straight for separate schools; while Mr. Haultain has repeatedly refused, when questioned at meetings, to say what he would do, after he got the decision from the Privy Council. In some Protestant communities a howl is being put up about the hierarchy of Quebec.

The fact that Mr. Haultain wanted the western boundary of Saskatchewan placed seventy-five miles further east than it is at present, rather takes away the strength from anything he may say concerning the keeping of the public lands for the province.

Premier Scott is addressing meetings nightly, and is making a splendid impression everywhere, as are also Attorney-General Lamont, and Hon. Mr. Calder, Minister of Education.

It is evident that Mr. Haultain is feeling the ground go from beneath him, as he has taken to cynical and sneering utterances in public debates, which are making enemies rather than friends for him.

HOUSE OF ROMANOFF

The history of the House of Romanoff is a remarkable one. Three hundred years it has held dominion over Russia. At the beginning of the Romanoff dynasty, the political liberties of the Russians were great, compared with those of today. The ancient traditions of the Slavs were democratic. The Byzantine historians, such as the Emperor Maurice, who had made their acquaintance on the battlefield, describe them as a free people, impatient of control. Later they were gradually organized into monarchial states, under an order of nobles, with special privileges. Rurik, the founder of the Russian power, was a prince of Novgorod in the ninth century. In the fifteenth century the power passed to the Grand Dukes of Moscow. But even with the Romanoffs in power, there was for long nothing like autocracy. The authority of the throne was limited by the vested rights of two assemblies, which in their general constitution were to some extent analogous to the two houses of a modern legislature. There was the Duma, or council of nobles, and the Sobor, which partook more of the nature of a general than a parliament. Michael Romanoff, the first of the line, pledged himself at his election to consult the Duma on all important questions, and apparently kept his promise, while the Sobor had full jurisdiction in all matters of commerce and finance. Every subsidy the first Romanoff emperor received was granted by the vote of the Sobor.

The record of the Romanoffs is one of strife and assassination. They came to the throne in times of bloodshed, and in bloodshed their reign has been perpetuated through three centuries. History does not explain why a Romanoff was elected. The country was in a turbulent state. The extinction of the royal House of Rurik had been followed by what is known as the Smutnoye Vremya, the time of trouble. The country had been torn by civil war and devastated by the victorious armies of the great Sigismund, King of Poland. The man who revived the sentiment of national unity, and who had begun to make headway against the Poles was Pozharski, and it might readily have been expected that upon him the choice of the boyars, or nobles, would fall. But they voted instead for a lad of fifteen, a noble of secondary rank, Michael Romanoff, whose only recommendation apparently was that his father was a high official of the Russian church. This view is strengthened by the fact that after the peace with Sigismund, Michael Romanoff was associated with his son as joint ruler. While Michael did little or nothing of any sort, Alexis, his successor was not so tame. From his accession dates the long record of strife between the democracy and bureaucracy which now threatens to culminate in the downfall of the House of Romanoff. Alexis refused to renew Michael's covenant with the assemblies, repeatedly acted in state affairs of importance without asking the advice of the Duma, and abolished the Sobor altogether after it had affirmed the act of his coronation. He prepared the way for Peter the Great. That monarch ruthlessly swept out of existence both bodies and established the absolute monarchy, which rested on bureaus, supported by the bayonets of a mighty standing army. From Peter's time to the present there has been no radical change in the political status of Russia, with the single exception that whereas Peter ruled through bureaus, his successors generally have allied the bureaus to rule in their name.

Before the accession of Michael the peasants had been free. Afterwards they were bound to the soil—a form of slavery very effective, if without the name. From that time onward their position and condition have gone on steadily from bad to worse. They have suffered beneath the iron heel of autocracy long and cruelly, but at last even the long-enduring spirit of the Slav has been compelled to action, and, perhaps, will gain the victory. It is a striking fact that throughout the record of the Romanoffs the reigns of successive Czars and Czarinas have been short and their sons few. There have been sixteen Czars and Czarinas, in addition to the two Catherine, who held the sceptre by reason of their marriage to Romanoffs.

The reigns of these eighteen sovereigns covers a span of two hundred and ninety years—or an average of only sixteen years to each. Only two of the whole line have lived to be sixty, and only a few times—directly—has the succession descended from father to son. The last three emperors have succeeded their fathers, and, indeed, the later Romanoffs have been much more respectable in their private lives than were their predecessors. Peter himself, left joint Czar when ten years of age with his imbecile half-brother, his sister Sophia being regent, shut up the latter in a convent prison and forced the former to resign. Then he stole a slave peasant woman from the household of one of his ministers, made her his mistress, then his wife, and finally empress, and it is from that union that the present Czar is descended. Peter, however, with all his faults, pointed the way to civilization. He created a new army, he extended and consolidated the empire, secured its recognition as one of the great powers, abolished many barbarous customs, such as the seclusion of women, the whipping of debtors, and introduced at least the semblance of many western institutions—such as the law of primogeniture, which, by the way, was abolished soon after his death.

Ifad those who followed Peter taken example by him, and also advanced with the times, Russia today would doubtless be free. But they did not. His grandson, Paul, who succeeded him, died childless after a three years reign, and the daughter of the imbecile brother of Peter ascended the throne. She died without issue and was succeeded by her sister's infant grandson, who nominally reigned for five months as Ivan VI, and was then deposed in favor of Elizabeth, Peter's younger sister, and was brutally murdered in his cell after twenty-three years' captivity. Elizabeth herself died childless—some grim fate has pursued these Romanoffs all through their history—and, in turn, her sister's son, Peter III, ascended the throne. He was a drunken weakling, but had an ambitious German wife, who, with the assistance of some of the ministers, deposed him. He was ordered to the Schlusselburg—the Russian Bastille—but he never reached it, having died on the way from the pressure of the thick fingers of the Minister Orlov upon his windpipe.

This was described in the official despatches as 'an attack of colic,' on the same basis that the murder of Peter the Great's son was announced as due to an apoplectic stroke, and was only another of those suspicious ailments so suspiciously common in the family history of the Romanoffs. Catherine the Second, the German murderer, who succeeded him, was that Catherine known to posterity as the 'Great.' And the great she was in war and diplomacy, though she did nothing to free the people from the brutal oppression of the nobility, which had all these years been increasing in cruelty and severity. She managed so thoroughly to adopt Muscovite ideas that even her morals were suited to the Romanoff Court, as is politely put by a famous historian who said that the perversity of her children was a matter

Witte is having some trouble in forming a cabinet owing to the demands that officials responsible for the horrible June massacres must be punished first.

AFTER HORSE THIEVES

Calgary, Nov. 22.—The R.N.W.M.P. have arrested a man named Owens, who is charged with stealing a horse.

The police believe this man to be a member of an organized gang of horse thieves who have been very active of late in the vicinity of Saskatoon, and who have it is thought, their headquarters near that place. The gang have recently been operating in this province, their method being to steal horses and to change the brand on the animals so that it could not be easily identified.

Col. Sanders, of "E" Division, says the police throughout the West have been making strenuous efforts to break up and arrest the gang, and it is thought their efforts will be successful in the near future.

THE REAL ISSUE IN THE WEST

(Toronto Globe)

Those who slightly declare the west too deeply interested in the production of No. 1 hard to get excited over the school clauses in the autonomy bill are unfair to the people of the wheat belt. They think of the school clauses and also of the production of No. 1 hard. They also think of the candidates and their promises and protestations. They take time to vote on occasion, and even give a passing kindly thought to the earnest solicitude of Toronto evening newspapers on their behalf; but, judging by the newspapers to hand, the question that looms bigger than all the others, both figuratively and actually, is the load of wheat that can be hauled to an elevator by a single team, a Brandon contemporary, in a two-column article such as our western papers reproduce. In describing upon the school legislation, tells of a south Brandon farmer who made a record haul by bringing to that town 188 bushels of wheat, and even our own newspapers will all reluctantly admit that he was quite well employed as in discussing abstract issues between Provincial and Federal jurisdiction. A picture, reproduced from a paper a year ago, shows the establishing of the previous record, which was 170 bushels. This is now surpassed with a margin of slightly bushels, and the new record is all the more remarkable through having been made with a wagon, while the former record load was hauled on a sleigh. The load that is now unrivalled was sold at 65 cents, which brought the happy and triumphant owner $122.20. Our contemporary dilates on the merits of the wagon, which, by the way, was imported, a good reason for removing the duty or increasing it, according to the point of view. While this is the largest load hauled to the Brandon market, other towns are in the competition. Our London contemporary tells of a load of 129 1-2 bushels hauled to that market. This is a close second to the Brandon performance, and as records are proverbially unstable we may look for the breaking of both before the season ends.

Editors and orators, absorbed in the contemplation of the higher politics or the lower police need not look for a superior air upon this chief issue in the west. Admitting the importance of the transportation question leads to the further admission that the most costly and most important link in the transportation of wheat is that between the farm and the elevator. The new famous load of Brandon was hauled thirteen miles, and in spite of the record, the cost per bushel must have been greater than that of a vastly greater haul by the railway and steamship lines. Soon the network of railroads highways in the west will make it no longer necessary for anyone to haul his own grain thirteen miles; but in the meantime, let the record grow, even if Toronto's political worries be forgotten in the excitement of a real contest.

LIGHT UP THE TRACK

Edmonton, Nov. 22, 1905.

Editor Bulletin:

Dear Sir: With the advent of the Canadian Northern Railway into our progressive city, might it be suggested that before any fatal accidents occur it would be wise to put up lights at all the street corners where it crosses. This would apply particularly to Kindness, Nuns, and Fraser avenues. Now that the winter is upon us, on a dark night the trains might come around the curve into Clark street before strangers would be aware of their proximity to the railway crossing. We do not want our advancement as a city to be marred by the possible loss of human life if it can be avoided.

Yours truly,

WILLIAM BEST.

House of Romanoff

of serious doubt. Catherine left an enlarged empire to her son Paul, and if he had been a strong man Russia would have had a splendid chance of becoming really great among the free nations of the earth. But Paul was even below the average Romanoff standard, and after four years' of atrocious cruelty, oppression and waste, he was murdered by his ministers, one of whom, Count Pahlen, wrote to the British Government at that time: "It has pleased the Eternal to call to himself His Imperial Majesty the Emperor Paul, deceased on the night of the 11th-12th of this month (March, 1801) by a stroke of apoplexy."

Thus at the beginning of the nineteenth century, Russia, after two hundred years of slavery and abominations called governments, was in a far more degraded position than before the first Romanoff ascended the throne. Alexander I. followed Paul, and the old story began again. Always the suffering, down-trodden people groping blindly after light and liberty, only to be thrown down and ground still deeper under the iron heels of the bureaucrats who ruled in the name of the Tsars. It is enough to wring pity from stones to read the story of Russia during this past century. The first Alexander was a cultured, and honestly inclined mystic, who regarded himself as a special envoy from the Almighty, and talked alternately of the sacred duty of suppressing liberal ideas throughout the whole world and of his desire to resign the awful burden of the Russian crown. For the first named purpose he organized the Holy Alliance, but before he had begun his schemes in connection with its furtherance, he died childless—which was the only blessing he ever conferred on Russia. His brother who must have been a wise man, refused the throne, and Nicholas, another son of Paul, a state-ly man, with much of the iron strength of Peter the Great, took it, reigned for thirty years by the assistance of the nobility, to whom he allowed every license, and ended his reign by precipitating the Crimean war, the shame of the defeat which caused his sudden death—another relief to Russia.

With the advent of the second Alexander came hopes of liberty at last. He was the only Romanoff who had both liberal views and the personal strength to enforce them. He gave the serfs emancipation, and had he not been assassinated seven years before he could have given them constitutional government, for on the very afternoon of his terrible death by a bomb he was about to sign a decree granting this. Alexander III, father of present Czar, then took up the splendid but blood-stained heritage of his house. But he inherited the evil counselors, Loris Melnikoff, his greatest statesman Russia has produced, and the enlightened mentor of Alexander II, was thrust aside, and the brutal Pobidonosoff, who has seen Russia's evil genius ever since, took his place.

What has happened since then is common knowledge. It has been the same old story—the present Czar until recently did little or nothing in the cause of freedom and enlightenment. Nicholas II, the present Czar, is a well-meaning man, unambitiously, but vacillating, and his weakness has been more disastrous to his country than the brutality of some of his predecessors. Not even the development of the Siberian empire is due to any of the Romanoffs. It was begun before their time by the Cossack chief Yermak, and has been continued to our own time by little bands of adventurers and colonizers, who received no aid and scanty thanks from the Government, which took all they gained for it. Russia's wavering policy in this respect may be gauged by her cession of Alaska to the United States in 1876, and of the Kurile Islands to Japan nine years later. Russia stands today in a position from which only a strong hand and a great mind can save her. Her people have less liberty than England and five hundred years ago, and are more ignorant than the Asiatic heathen. Yet in territory and population she is second only to the British Empire; her natural resources are greater than those of the United States or Canada—vast stretches of fertile land unequalled in the world, great forests, untold mineral wealth, every variety of climate, magnificent networks of rivers forming a superb natural water highway, a hundred and thirty millions of people and room for as many more. The Russians are not an exhausted race, but are vigorous and hardy, and seem as potentially able as any in the world. Yet, Russia is today in a slough of misery, desolation and despair. Only time can show whether the dawning of the day of liberty has really arrived with the present Czar's present manifesto, or whether this is only a false dawn that will end in a revolution compared with which even that of France in 1793 may pale.

STOVES

will soon be needed, and no doubt they will go with a rush.

If you want a first class up to date Cast Iron Range that has been a winner for many years, we have the "Happy Thought". There is more of this Range in use than any other on Range in Canada, and no person has ever heard of a poor one. Then, if you want an all steel and malleable iron range, we have the "Monarch." You cannot break this range, and it has a mirror polished top which makes it a thing of beauty to look at as well as to use.

For any up to date line of heating stoves we think we have them all beat. It is not a case of you having to take what we have; our assortment justifies us in saying you can get just what you want from us.

We have from the smallest to the largest heating stoves in any style and for any purpose, to burn both coal and wood, or both. The prices are made to suit the pockets of all, and while we make only a very small profit on each stove we think the quantity we sell justifies us in saying that we can sell on so close a margin and still hold our own. We have everything in Stove Trimmings, and first class Mechanics to deliver and put them up. Do not waste time in asking all over the city, but come direct to us.

TRACING A MURDERER

(Winnipeg Free Press)

The return today of Inspector McGinnis of the Royal North West Mounted Police, from Cat Lake, marks the completion of one of those numerous exploits which have made the force well known throughout the Empire. The inspector came in accompanied by two members of the force from Kenora, where he lodged in jail an Ojibway Indian named Tushwegh, charged with the murder last April of a member of the same tribe named Peter Geeshigoose. Cat Lake, the scene of the murder, is located in an almost unexplored wilderness just half way between Lake Winnipeg and Hudson's Bay. It is the heart of a country regarding which little is known to white people and traversed by none except the Ojibway's, who make it their annual trip south from the bay.

Early in September last Inspector McGinnis was informed that a murder had been committed at this point in the preceding month of April. The facts of the murder are said to have been brought in by officials of the company making the annual trip down to civilization in the York boat. The directions given to Inspector McGinnis in September were to proceed to Dinowic, a point on the Canadian Pacific railway half way between Winnipeg and Port Arthur, to secure Indian guides and to proceed by way of the Cat River to Cat Lake; to find and arrest the Indian Tushwegh, to bring him to Kenora and deliver him to the local authorities of the province of Ontario, to be held for trial.

The country traversed northward from Dinowic was found to be exceedingly difficult and almost impassable. Cat Lake which looks simple on the map, is in reality not a river but a labyrinth of water through which no white man could find his way. Under the guidance of experienced Indian boatmen, the journey was made, the party sustaining themselves during the long trip on the game and fish secured from day to day. The country traversed consists largely of water, rock and scrub, and was exceedingly forbidding in appearance. After many days travel Cat Lake was reached, and the police came into contact with Indians. There were something like 100 natives in the vicinity, including the Cranes, a little further north, and if anything had gone wrong at the lake, no white man would have known the catastrophe, until the York boat came down next summer. The police made careful enquiry and took no unnecessary chances. The story told by the Ojibways was to the effect that the accused Tushwegh had been living for some time with an Indian woman, a sister of the murdered man, Geeshigoose. Geeshigoose had sought to persuade his sister to leave the accused, and had finally succeeded in doing so. The accused had then made threats against the brother who was found subsequently dead in his wigwam. He had previously been in good health, and no reason but violence could be assigned for his death. When found a rope was around his neck, which was believed to have been placed there subsequently to his death. No one saw the deed committed and the evidence against the accused in entirely circumstantial.

Evidence in the case was exceedingly difficult to secure. The Indians in the north speak more Cree than Ojibway, and the interpreter had difficulty in making himself understood. The reticence of the native is also their most marked characteristic, and in dealing with strangers they have more reluctance to speak. The Indian placed under arrest refused to speak of the subject in any way. He denied any knowledge of the murder, but beyond this could not be induced to say anything of any kind. The work of unravelling the matter and bringing the crime home to the guilty party still rests upon the officials of the crown. That a cold-blooded murder was committed there is no doubt. The only person known to have any interest in the death of Geeshigoose is the accused. The case will come up for trial at the next assize, when such evidence as can be secured will be presented by the Crown.

GOVERNMENT OFFICES

Arrangement of Departmental Offices in the New Quarters in the Empire Block

The offices of the provincial Government are now all located in the splendid new Empire Block, corner of Jasper Avenue and First Street, the offices formerly in the Thistle Bank and elsewhere having been removed to the new building. Following are the situations of the various departments and offices:

Second Floor—Department of Education and Attorney-General's Department.

To the left of the stairway are the offices of Hon. A. C. Rutherford, Premier and Minister of Education; Hon. C. W. Cross, Attorney-General; Hon. N. T. Finlay, Minister of Agriculture; J. K. McDonald, Deputy Attorney-General; executive council room, offices of the provincial treasurer and auditor.

To the right of the stairway are the general offices of the Department of Education and the Deputy Attorney General.

On the third floor is the Department of Public Works. To the left of the stairway are the offices of Hon. Dr. McVicker, Hon. W. H. Cushing, Minister of Public Works; J. Stocks, Deputy Minister; draughting rooms; office of the director of surveys; office of the clerk in charge of local improvement branch, and the cashier of the local improvement branch.

To the right are the offices of the local improvement branch, steam boilers branch, correspondence branch, chief clerk's office, and the offices of J. E. Richards, acting Government Printer, and Deputy Provincial Secretary.

On the fourth floor are the temporary offices of the Department of Agriculture.

BYE-ELECTIONS ENDORSE THE GOVERNMENT

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, Liberal, was elected by 500 majority in North York; in West Lambton, F. F. Pardee, Liberal was elected by 337 majority; in Antigonish, N.S., W. G. Chisholm, Liberal, was elected by 284 majority, while in Wentworth, E. L. Smith, Conservative, is probably elected by a majority of 8.

THE CONTESTS

Toronto, Nov. 22.—Up to a late hour Wentworth is in doubt. The last dispatch received declared Smith, conservative, elected by a majority. With the impressive victories in North York and West Lambton, the Liberals take a cheery view of the situation regarding the Province, as in accord with the rest of the Dominion in supporting the best Government Canada ever had.

Aylesworth's triumph is particularly gratifying in view of the seductive promises and promises of his responsible opponent, and this grand old Liberalism gives the postmaster-general a handsome victory. In West Lambton, F. F. Pardee has won a notable victory over Lesueur, who was backed by Conservatives and the high protectionists, which is strong in that oil producing territory and among the border town merchants who suffer from the United States competition, both duty paid and smuggled.

In Wentworth, Sealey, Liberal, had to fight the cry of non-residence, which was raised against him, and Smith the local man with extensive business connections throughout the country made an extremely awkward candidate to tackle.

In Wentworth circumstances were such as to leave the issue doubtful till the last subdivision was counted. Sealey had been formerly declared elected, but several ballots were thrown out and E. D. Smith, Conservative, was declared elected by ten. The Liberals appealed the case and a new election was ordered. Now it is claimed Smith leads Sealey by a narrow margin of eight, after a keen contest.

THE SOLID EIGHTEEN

Halifax, Nov. 32.—Nova Scotia's solid eighteen is unbroken, as Chisholm was elected for Antigonish by a majority of 284, over E. L. Giroult, Conservative. The battle was keenly contested, but attracted little comment outside the county.

THE GLOBE'S COMMENT.

Toronto, Nov. 23.—The Globe this morning says, "W. F. Maclean, and others, are in open revolt from their party, and led a bitter and unscrupulous attack on Aylesworth in North York. Had he succeeded the member for South York would undoubtedly have figured in an organized mutiny against Mr. Borden's leadership. The decisive result in North York relieves the Conservative party of one or two awkward problems. Maclean has been given rope and has hanged himself in the most approved fashion. The Opposition will doubtless feel disheartened, but there is a silver lining to the cloud. The small section of the party which imagines it monopolizes the brains of the party has had opportunity and has ludicrously shown its impotence. It is not our part to be the counsellor for the Conservative party."

OPERA

The Russian Opera Co. presented the "Czar of Normandy" to a crowded house last night. It was a prima donna's night, for great many of the audience many of whom had taken part in the local production of two years ago and who enjoyed to the full the peculiar pleasure of seeing the play from the audience instead of from the stage, the Russians undoubtedly strengthened their hold on the music loving people of Edmonton by their clever interpretation of an opera which was so well done by the local amateurs.

The scene par excellence was unquestionably the ghost scene, one could hardly imagine that the inimitable fun maker Claude Anderson was the dreadful old miser Gaspard and it was proof of his great versatility as an actor. His portrayal of miser with his gold as well as the ghost business was masterly and realistic in the extreme and enraptured the audience. Surprisingly the good for nothing, "Hazel Devonport" was the Hayden to the life. Miss Devonport sings and acts exceptionally well, her song "I may be Prince" gave plenty of scope for her beautiful voice.

Lucia Nola was an exceedingly sweet "Germine" with a voice of beautiful quality and good range used with good effect.

Frank Callender the tenor as usual sustained his high reputation with his fine rendering of "On Billows Rocking."

The Marquis was cast by Hilliard Campbell, his fine voice was shown to great advantage in his singing "Silent Heroes."

The fun makers were Jack Leslie as the Notary and John A. Dewey as the Bailie, they kept the audience in continuous fits of laughter with their funny play.

The chorus, though small, is exceedingly well balanced and sing with brightness and vivacity that is exceedingly pleasing.

Manager Gauston is certainly to be congratulated on the very excellent company he has brought together.

The company will produce the Bohemian Girl, "Rattle" this evening and should have a bumper house.

LOCAL

—The new grist mill at St. Albert has commenced work.

—A large addition will be built to the Windsor hotel next spring.

—No practice of McDonnell church choir on Friday evening owing to the holiday.

—Don't fail to hear "With Heart Bowed Down" at the opera this evening.

—Three lads, who were up for stealing chickens on Saturday were fined so each by Magistrate Lowan.

—The after spike to be used in connection with tomorrow's celebration is on view in E. Raymer's window.

—One of the musical treats of the season will be to hear, "I Dreamt I Dwelt in Marble Halls," at the opera this evening.

—The attendance at Alberta College is increasing each week. A good many students are coming in to take the commercial course.

—An auction sale of Great estate lots will be held in the building next Blouet's furniture store this evening beginning at 8 o'clock. One hundred and fifty lots will be offered. The Great West Land Co. are agents and G. A. Gouin the auctioneer.

—Auctioneer Smith held a large sale at Riverview last night on Tuesday afternoon. Two spans of mules brought $200 and $250. Horses went for $100 prices. Young cattle went very high. Cows were a good steady price. The attendance was large and bidding brisk.

—H. A. Hall has installed a Mid-dleby steel portable oven in his bakery next the Bank of Commerce. The oven, which weighs 25 tons, is the largest of its kind, and is the first to appear in Edmonton. It is heated very quickly and will bake about four hundred loaves at one baking.

—It N. Smith, a teamster in the employ of the Mays Coal Co., was seriously injured this morning at the Bush mine, about six miles from Edmonton. He was driving up a hill with a heavy load of coal, and met an empty wagon, the driver of which had gone to sleep. Smith, who was walking beside his rig, failed to turn out until too late, and was caught between the wheels of the two wagons. Several ribs were broken, and there were other injuries. Dr. Hislop was sent for and drove to the mine in company with Mrs. Smith. Smith will be brought to his home in the city this afternoon.

TO IMPROVE TRADE.

Ottawa, Nov. 21.—Marchese Dorio, who is in Canada representing the Italian Government, with a view to increasing the trade between the two countries, had interviews today with the Ministers of the Crown and left tonight for Winnipeg. His intention is to remain in Canada for a year. He says there is a market for soft wheat, but hard wheat is not grown there. He goes west to look over the field.
